I have lived in Salt Lake City, Utah for over 34 years, read my article, then we can discuss what truly is happening in the heart of Mormonism. You might be surprised by what you will find out. Enjoy.

Couple of things; First Jesus always talked about a small group:. The truthfulness can not be measured by membership numbers.

I see that you been in the area where 100-90% attendance in any Church meetings has been usuall... not around here. What people are used to is 10% or less. Interesting is also that IF you move to a Catholic country you are often marked a Catholic... wearther you like it or not... has been a suprise to some I know (not LDS). If the LDS Church dont give out the number of those not attending/resighned... then there is no way to prove you are right. Church is even excommunicateing people... so they can not be more interested in numbers than gospel.

Yes enjoy the turkyday. I just ate macaroni.

I don't hold any degrees but just to let you know that I have found what I have been looking for in Jesus Christ only and not in some religion that can't support its claims with any concrete evidence whatsoever. Slowly but surely many people are already leaving the LDS church to find others that truly are teaching the simple gospel of Jesus Christ. Number don't mean much and when a church keeps tab of only the ones that have joined this church but give out no information about how many truly attend and believe in it then something is definitely wrong with their numbers but "corporations" love to use numbers to prove that their "business" is growing. To God numbers don't mean anything otherwise since Muslims, Buddhists and Hindus outnumber Christians then this must mean that they are the true religions. I am glad that you have found what you have been looking for and hopefully this religion will not let you down once you find out the truth about their claims and realize that what "looks" good is not sometimes what is "good". Only what Jesus promises is true because He is the "truth". If you truly search for the truth you will surely find it and sorry to say it does not lie within the walls of Mormonism. Read this article of mine that I wrote last year and you might get a little closer to the truth. Hopefully it will help you open your eyes, it is my wish and prayer. Mario

I dont know what degrees you hold and I dont much care. I find requiements for placenames ridicilous. Besides the Temples place in Jerusalem is not totally certain, meaning that of the exact place there are various opinions. Besides thatra are placenames from the old continent in the BoM that also are where they should be according to BoM. May I remind you this was only a small part that was translated. As a mamber of Fair Mormon I think I heard it all and there really is no reason to doubt BoM or LDS faith. Hope you find what you are looking for, I found mine.

I am sorry for mentioning your spelling, it was not right for me to have mentioned this to you. I have dealt with a couple of people in Temple Square that have done work for Fairmormon and I thought that the people that answered the questions presented to them were people knowledgeable and had college degrees in defending what the LDS church teaches to be true. I can imagine that you have been a convert to the LDS religion and since I don't know how long you have been a member I don't know how much knowledge you might have about their doctrines and beliefs. If the most important think about a book is its message then the Teachings of Buddha and other religious books written about other religions then that could lead many people astray. The places are also very important otherwise the Bible would not have mentioned so many places where Jesus went to. Not to persuade us that Jesus was the Christ but just to tell the whole story and not just what we needed to hear. Finding so much evidence of what Jesus described in the Bible and not finding one single evidence of what Jesus did not describe in the Book of Mormon seems to create a problem. Having evidence that certain places did exist gives credibility to what one is teaching but it doesn't convert people into believing what Jesus said to them was true or not. Many books have many good messages in them this doesn't mean that they are the word of God. It doesn't mean that their messages are without error. There is no welcome to Jerusalem sign in the Old World also but one can see the temple that was destroyed and other things that Jesus talked about like the Sea of Galilee or the Dead Sea or the mount of olives and many other things. Since Jesus didn't decide to stay too long in the New World because of His busy schedule somewhere else then maybe knowing the names of the apostles he chose and the places He visited were not important to Him like they were in the Bible. Hopefully this might shed some light on what is missing in the Book of Mormon but is very clear in the Bible. Again sorry if you thought that I was making fun of you which was not my intention at all.

Thank you for your rekomendation, but as a person using 3 languages every day, I do have problemns in spelling and my spelling helps are getting crazy over constant change of langyages and they cant keep up with me. I also happen to to have a bad finger and miss a couple of letters every now and then not mentoining my Dysgrafia et Dyslexia = I write wrong anyway. Sorry if this is disturbing you. And no I did not get hot I just tried to get you thinking of ways why there is no same names on cities as there was in teh olden days. How ever there is a Lehi in Central America. My answer is not "I dont know", so I could not give that to you. I happen to live in the Old World and I been quite a bit around. That they ahve not found a sighn "Well come to Zarahemna" in Central America does not bother me a bit. Socially it looks like a good chanse. Anyway the place of the BoM is not important, the message is. I am sorry my spelling irritates you. I hope you find your answer.

Thank you for your response, I would recommend that you check your spelling the next time you respond to simple questions that are asked. The wording you used with capital letters seems to indicate that maybe you didn't like the questions that I asked and you got a little hot under the collar about my asking these simple questions that I just wanted a simple response. If you don't know what the answer is a simple "I don't know" would have sufficed. By the way, I was not referring to any city in Russia but the cities mentioned in the Bible. I would suggest that you travel to the places in the Old World and see the thousands of artifacts that have been discovered proving that what the Bible says about these places is true. Thank you anyways for taking the time to respond to my e-mail I guess I will have to continue to wait until I am in front of God to finally receive the correct response to these simple questions or maybe go find some other sources of information from the wide world of the internet.

What European capital ; Cristiania? Where in Russland is Leningrad? Can you find these on your map? ..... NO?.... And yet it is not more than 300 years the firstone was on the map and when I was young Leningrad was a name of a Russian city. On the other hand HOW can you be sure that the cities mentioned in the Bible are the right ones? I heard at lest of one that actually was situated a few miles from where it is today. You really believe that skeletons would survive in the climate of central America? What is a sward to you and what was the sword for these people? There has been found many kinds of weapons in Central America. Everything the BoM states is there... the "welcome to Zarahemna" plank is not found yet. Is it God that reveals the names in the Bible... or is it the people who keep to the old names?

I also suggest that you visit <https://www.fairmormon.org/search> and write the sword or weapons or biblical towns or something like that... you will see there are answers to all questions, another thing is if they please you. I hope that helps.

Thank you for writing Fair Mormon.

Here is a special question. If in the Bible it clearly states the locations of different cities and places then why doesn't it clearly state it in the Book of Mormon if it truly is another Testament of Jesus Christ? Many artifacts have also been discovered in the Old World verifying that what the Bible states is true but no such artifacts have been found in the Americas. According to the Book of Mormon many people have died fighting wars but as of yet there has been found no place where so many skeletons have been found all together in one place. No swords or any other weaponry have been found either. Why would God be so plain in what is described in the Bible to be true but leave up to pure faith to believe that what the Book of Mormon states is true. Just a simple question that nobody has been able to give a simple answer to during all these years that I have been a member of this church. Let's see if you can give it a shot. Thank you for taking the time to answer my e-mails.

Thank you for writing to Fair Mormon. I am one of the volunteers answering the questions sent to us. Yes there are many different thoughts about where the BoM took place. There has not been given a special vision about the place so all opinions are welcome. However those who study archeology and such may find places that seem to be better than others to fit in the scenes of BoM. We all are free to choose our standpoint. If you have a special question in mind you are welcome to ask again. Thank you for writing Fair Mormon.

The book of Mormon spiritual and temporal Witnesses presentation

Will you kindly tell us about yourself?

I am a member of the LDS church for over 36 years. I am 67 years old.

I have read several articles of yours and you are the experts in answering questions that one might have. I just want to know the truth.

Message:

I have attended the 90 minute presentation and the speaker showed a lot of evidence about the Book of Mormon locations being in Mesoamerica and its connection to the Maya civilization and also about Quetzalcoatl. I have read two of your articles: Jesus Christ/relationship to Quetzalcoatl and Book of Mormon/Lamanites/relationship to Amerindians/Maya and Olmec. At least from what I see there seems to be a difference of opinion between the articles and what he taught during his presentation. He suggested that if I had any questions that you were a good source for the answers to them. Thank you for your help, Mario
